Writing in the Sciences: Pearson/Longman. Ann Penrose and Steven Katz first define public audiences as a "wide range of listeners and readers with a variety of interests, needs, and educational backgrounds." "No single, 'rationalistic' formula will suffice to define them or their interests."

Communicating with Public Audiences, Penrose/Katz ...

In Writing in the Sciences: Exploring Conventions of Scientific Discourse, Ann M. Penrose and Steven B. Katz note that the scientist who wishes to communicate with a public audience must weigh carefully not only the audience's prior knowledge of a topic, but also the nature and degree of its interest in that topic. Scientists communicating with their peers can depend on their readers to be both knowledgeable and intrinsically interested in their topic.
